

TRI

- He throws his arm, and with a long-drawn dash
Blends all together; then distinctly trips
From this to that; then quick returning skips
And snatches this again, and pauses there. Craslow.
On old Lycæus or Cyllene hoar,
Trip no more in twilight ranks,
Though Erymanth your loss deplore,
A better soil shall give you thanks. Milton's Arcades.
She bounded by, and tripp'd to light,
They had not time to take a steady flight. Dryden.
To the garden walk she took her way,
To sport and trip along in cool of day. Dryden.
Stay, nymph, he cry'd, I follow not a foe;
Thus from the lion trips the trembling doe. Dryden.
Well thou dost to hide from common fight
Thy close intrigues, too bad to bear the light:
Nor doubt I, but the silver-footed dame
Tripping from sea on such an errand came. Dryden.
He'll make a pretty figure in a triumph,
And serve to trip before the victor's chariot. Addison.
The lower plaits of the drapery in antique figures in sculpture
And painting, seem to have gathered the wind when the person is in a posture of tripping forward. Addison.

2. Treble; three times repeated.
We have taken this as a moderate measure betwixt the highest and lowest; but if we had taken only a triple proportion, it would have been sufficient. Barnet.
If then the atheist can have no imagination of more senses than five, why doth he suppose that a body is capable of more! If we had double or triple as many, there might still be the same suspicion for a greater number without end.
Bentley's Sermons.

To TRIPLE. v. a. [from the adjective.]
1. To treble; to make thrice as much, or as many.

TRI

- To what purpose should words serve, when nature hath more to declare than groans and strong cries; more than streams of bloody sweat; more than his doubled and tripled prayers can express. Hooker's Eccl. Pol.
If these halpence should gain admittance, in no long space of time his limited quantity would be tripled upon us. Swift.

poetry sometimes on the last.
1. To celebrate a victory with pomp; to rejoice for victory.
The triumphing of the wicked is short, and the joy of the hypocrite is but for a moment. Jab xx. 5.
Your victory, alas, begets my fears;
Can you not then triumph without my tears. Dryden.
2. To obtain victory.
This great commander fought many times to persuade So-lyman to forbear to use his forces any farther against the Christians, over whom he had sufficiently triumphed, and turn them upon the Persians. Knox's Hist. of the Turks.
Then all this earthy grossness quit,
Attir'd with stars, we shall for ever sit,
Triumphing over death, and chance, and time. Milton.
There fix thy faith and triumph o'er the world;
For who can help, or who can save besides?
While blooming youth and gay delight
Sit on thy rosy cheeks content,
Thou hast, my dear, undoubted right
To triumph o'er this destin'd breath. Prior.
3. To insult upon an advantage gained.
How ill beseming is it in thy sex
To triumph, like an Amazonian trull. Shakespeare.
Sorrow on all the pack of you,
That triumph thus upon my misery. Shakespeare.
